

title	z Early Networks of Human Trafficking in Colonial Southeast Asia 1800-1945
name	Christina Firpo
phone	6-2834
email	cfirpo@calpoly.edu
additional
department	History
proj_desc	Modern networks of human trafficking plague Southeast Asia and supply men, women and children to international trafficking schemes, many of which occur within the border of the US. This project seeks to trace the historical foundations of these transnational trafficking networks in Southeast Asia. I propose to work with a maximum of three honors program students to conduct interdisciplinary primary research on prostitution, kidnappings and child sales in colonial Southeast Asia. The aim of this project is to produce a conference paper that will eventually be published in a peer reviewed journal. If accepted, this course will appeal to humanities and liberal arts students. Please note that my current student, Amanda Grossman (second year honors student) has said she is "extremely" interested in taking this class .
inter_desc	N/A
links
students	3
majors	HIST, ENGL, POLS, WS, ES, HUM, CRP, LS
date_added	2007-11-28 16:27:45